These were discussed at a meet-After him followed the army of officials ing of the authorities of the royal houseand newspaper correspondents. The King's departure was as unostentatious as that of an American President. He and his suite, in civilian attire, left the castle without a military escort and with no sign of pomp.

Queen Victoria's body was embalmed last evening and occupied the center of the diuguard. Within two Indian attendants remain, in company with the ladies in waiting, who are constantly present. The body is attired in black. The face is perfectly ceful and the remains have been placed with the arms folded. On the breast rests a beautiful gold cross. The head is inclined slightly to the right. All about repose quantities of beautiful flowers. The honor of first seeing the body of the Queen was conferred on her personal retinue, and such a simple, pathetic scene as marked this afternoon could hardly have occurred in any other monarchy. All the servants and tenants were admitted. The footmen, housemaids, coachmen, stable lads and policemen filed through the house for several hours. There were no formallties. Bent old men and women, and children who had gown up on the estate and had regarded Queen Victoria as a friend and patron, rather than as a sovereign, took their turn, and their grief was the sorrow of those who had lost a friend. In the meantime many residents of Cowes and neighboring towns and some prominent ple applied at the porter's lodge for nission, but these were told to come to-

The commencement of King's first voyage was a memorable and impressive event.

Nothing has been decided at Osborne House regarding the funeral arrangements or the removal of the body and nothing wal be until after the arrival of the King. TIEN-TSIN, Jan. 18.-The United States transport Sumner, which has arrived at Taku, brought 150 troops to replace Americans who have been invalided.

Two deserters from the American troops with an American flag have recently committed acts of depredation in the surrounding country and have blackmailed the villagers. Both were captured, but one succeeded in making his escape and is still at large. It is probable they will be shot. Three Sikhs who were found guilty of sin ilar acts were taken to the scene of their depredations to-day and given fifty lashes each. Many lawless acts are being committed. A French soldier has been sentenced to a term of five years in prison for drawing his bayonet upon an Australian policeman. Two Frenchmen have been shot and an American has been stabbed in saloon brawls. The French soldiera draw their bayonets on the slightest

SUICIDE AND OTHER FRAUDS.

A Masterly Review of Their Iniquity in Connection with Life Insurance. Charles T. Lewis, of New York, has been delivering a series of admirable lectures in that city upon the subject of life insurance. His last address covered the theme of "The Relation of Life Insurance to Society and Government," and in the course of his remarks Mr. Lewis said: "Speculation in life insurance usually takes the form of the insurance of diseased lives, graveyard substitutions, impersonations and the like frauds. A conspicuou friend to be insured for $25,000 and the medical examiner pronounced the man to very successful institute at Greenfield. H. | be in perfect health. In a fortnight the F. McMahan, of Union county, and W. S. | company ascertained that the person upon whom the policy was issued was a nabitual drunkard. The premium was given back to Fox and the surrender of the policy asked. This Fox refused, and when the insured died Fox sued the company for the amount of insurance. The jury, as is usual in many cases, decided for Fox, but as criminal proceedings were immediately instituted and

> "An attempt to obtain insurance for an event under the control of the insurer deviates from the sound principles of the business. One point of practical interest with regard to the above principle relates to death by suicide. Here the object of insurance is defeated by the attempt to turn chance to certainty. The only safeguard from this event is to exact absolute proof of death by natural agencies. The general public mind has been so poisoned with regard to this principle that until the last three years the general mode has been in favor of removing from policies all restrictions in case of suicide. An influence in changing this idea was a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in 1898, with regard to the Runk case in Philadelphia. Before that one company after another joined in the race to throw off all restrictions. In fact, a premium was offered as a reward for committing the crime. The Legislature of Missouri passed a law, which is unique, to this effect: That no insurance company shall be permitted to refuse to pay a claim in case of suicide unless it be proven that suicide was contemplated when the insurance was taken. A parallel case would be that of a company formed to bribe men to commit crime. It would be no greater offense against society and Christianity to offer a premium for murder, rape or robbery, and the company is a party to the crime if the crime results. It is a notorious fact, well known t) actuaries, that when a company took this business the number of suicides inreased in that company. The conclusion cannot be resisted that the company is the direct occasion and partner of the crime. There is an occasion for the supervision of private contracts by law here, when the company rewards immortality and crime." Mr. Lewis then spoke of the false popuar idea about the value of the franchises of insurance companies and the injustice of taxing an industry which is a medium for the distribution of losses. The State supervision of insurance places a restraint upon the enterprise of companies such as is put upon no other business, a restraint particularly vexatious because exercised by > ignorant officials. Mr. Lewis suggested a remedy by investing the courts with power to regulate insurance.
